1. Read the following passage then answer the questions that follow.

When I reported Waleed's operation, lots of you said that you wanted to read more about medicine. So I met Dr. Mark Way of the London Medical College. We talked about various new inventions and discoveries. 'The speed of development is huge,' he said, and he added that it would continue in every area, including new medical operations and powerful new medicines. 'And,' he pointed out, 'it isn't just high-tech developments: there's also much better basic health care around the world.' That meant, he said, that people were living longer, healthier lives than their parents and grandparents had lived. Then we talked about disabled people. Dr. Way said that they had accepted their disabilities in the past, whereas some could now recover. For example, medical science was helping people to hear and see.
